Freezing Weather Improves Travel Over the State

Motor Bus Service Reported To Be Much Better Today.

RIVERS RISE SLOWER

Lowlands of White, Arkansas, and Ouachita Rivers Under Water

LITTLE ROCK, Jan. 10.—(P)—Freezing weather brought rainsoaked Arkansas from its first flood crest of the year. A rain, which had continued for three days over most all portions of Arkansas has ceased. High water over the state is reported but the rivers are rising more slowly.

Lowlands of the Arkansas, White and Ouachita rivers are under water, but the situation is not considered serious. A few residents living in Little Rock were forced today to move to higher grounds as water from small streams pushed in around their homes.

Highways throughout the state which suffered from the down pour of rain the past few days, were improved by freezing weather last night and today. Motor bus service, which was hampered greatly by impassable roads, is reported better today.

The weather bureau forecast fair and colder tonight and Saturday over the state. The river forecast said the Arkansas would rise 10 feet at Little Rock by tomorrow, 14 feet at Pine Bluff by January 12. The White river will see little change at Batesville and above, but at Newport it will reach 21 feet by tomorrow night, 22 feet at Georgetown by Sunday and 25 feet at DeVall's Bluff January 15, and 27 feet at Clarendon January 16.

Arkansas Tax Commission Will Assist Assessors

LITTLE ROCK, Jan. 10.—(P)—A member of the Arkansas Tax commission will visit every county assessor in the state between Jan. 20 and April 10 to assist the assessors in making their 1929 assessments. Members of the commission announced Chairman E. W. Brown said the object of the visits would be to help assessors check their assessments and to assist in making assessments as nearly equal a possible between counties.

Dismiss Grand Jury As Report Is Filed

Final Report Shows 47 Indictments and 41 Witnesses Quizzed.

PRESCOTT, Jan. 10.—The Grand Jury for the January term of Nevada County Circuit Court was discharged yesterday by Judge G. R. Haynie after submitting its final report. The report showed 47 indictments were found, and 41 witnesses examined.

The Grand Jury began its work Tuesday after receiving instructions from Judge Haynie, who was elected by the bar to preside over the court. Court was adjourned Tuesday until Monday of next week when the criminal docket will be taken up, and Judge Haynie came over from Camden yesterday to hear the Grand Jury report.

The report was signed by H. V. Scott, foreman, and J. Gee and Hartwell Greeson, clerks.

Bounties In Arkansas Stopped Permanently

LITTLE ROCK, Jan. 10.—Payments of bounties on wolves and bobcats and other predatory animals probably never will again be paid by the state according to the Arkansas game and fish commission.

Payments ceased with exhaustion of funds last April 1. "The United States department of agriculture is co-operating with the state in predatory animal control and under the co-operative plan, the bounty system cannot well be followed," Mr. Amisler said. "So far as is known now, bounties will not again be offered by the state."

State and federal hunters are employed to trap wolves and bobcats in infested areas of the state. Much saving, Mr. Amisler said, has resulted to game and livestock owners from activities of these hunters.

Aged Fortune Teller Robbed by Masked Men

GREEN FOREST, Jan. 10.—Mrs. Angle Paxton, widely known in this section as a fortune teller, who is about 80 years old, was robbed Sunday night of $275 by three masked men. She lives south of here at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ap Taylor. Mr. Taylor was away from home when the men appeared and robbed Mrs. Paxton.

Before the death of her husband, six years ago, she and Mr. Paxton lived for 40 years in a cabin on the inaccessible crest of a mountain. No vehicle could approach nearer than a mile, it is said.

Baby—or Divorce.

A baby within two years—or a divorce! That was the unprecedented contract attached to the marriage license of 25-year-old Ethel Owen, above, of Sun Prairie, Wis., and William Kenneth Meyer, self-styled nudist, when they were married by a magistrate in Philadelphia. Rebelling against the commonplace marriage idea, they agreed that if a child has not been born to them by January, 1932, either may apply for an absolute divorce.

Foreman Boy Wins In Farming Match

549 High School Students Participate In Farm Contest.

LITTLE ROCK, Jan. 10.—(P)—Charles Beull, 16, of Wilson, Mississippi county, winner of the future farmer, three-acre contest, also won the three-acre corn contest conducted for Smith-Hughes vocational agricultural students, R. B. Smith, supervisor of vocational agriculture for the state department of education, announced.

Participating in the contest were 549 high school students.

Young Beull produced 406.56 bushels of corn on three acres of bottom land an average of 135.53 bushels an acre.

Winners of second, third and fourth prizes in the bottom land contest were: Fred Burns, Bruno, Marion county; Glendon Wilson, Greenbrier; Faulkner county, and Vernel McNabb, Vilonia, Faulkner county.

Winners in the hill land division were: Celia Gilliland, Peebe, White county; Orville Morris, Greenbrier; Lester Lewis, Foreman, Little River county, and Carnes Floyd, Magazine, Logan county.

Salesman Taking Orders At Gurdon, Mops Up

A large number of Gurdon housewives are sadder but wiser.

A week or two before Christmas a salesman made a house to house canvass of Gurdon selling blankets and bedspreads to housewives.

His plan was to collect a certain amount when he took the order, the balance to be paid upon receipt of the goods.

The salesman gave a printed receipt purporting to be from the McKay Company, of 510 McKay Building, St. Louis, Mo., and some of the receipts were signed by W. A. Moovis as representative.

A number of Gurdon ladies bit, and thereby is the tale. They are still waiting for the arrival of their goods, and Mr. Moovis is not here. Poor Yorick.

One lady wrote the company at the above address. She received a note from the postal department at St. Louis that there was no such company listed in the directory, and that there was no such building in that city.

It is estimated that he got quite a tidy sum of money and the good, trusting ladies got experience.

Pacific Coast Shivers From Cold

Blizzards From Rockies Spread Eastward of Plains and Prairies.

(By Associated Press)
Only Atlantic and south eastern states were immune from the cold wave which spread over the country today.

California and the entire Pacific coast shivered from a heavy snow which fell in the mountains. Blizzards from the Rockies spread over the west and southwest plains and prairies today.

Unusual rain which fell from chilly skies in central Mississippi valley caused streams in Arkansas, Tennessee and Kentucky to move out of their banks.

New York, Philadelphia and other points along the Atlantic coast reported declining temperatures.

Public Services Are Discussed At Local Luncheon

Details of Banking and Other Business Activities Are Revealed

COVER WIDE RANGE

Insurance, Telephones, and Problems of Holiday Regulation

The public services offered by local business houses were discussed in a series of talks by Hope merchants, managers and bankers, at the Rotary club luncheon today in Hotel Barlow.

C. C. Spragins, cashier of the Citizens National Bank, discussed the free services which a bank gives to its customers. "A bank handles many out-of-town items free for its customer," he said. "We say that these items don't cost anything, because we have correspondents which eliminate any exchange charge; but at the same time the banking overhead on each item is approximately 4 cents—for which the bank obtains nothing but customer and community good will."

"There is the additional overhead if one belongs to the national banking system, which is imposed by the Federal Reserve rules."

"A bank is under heavy expense to provide free checks and other printed matter for customers and the general public. It has a tremendous overhead for the particular purpose of making safe commercial funds and the transfer of same. This extends to all kinds of insurance, such as burglary, fire and messenger insurance, securing safe passage of money between the banks and the postoffice, or the individual business house."

A Bank's Obligations

"However, all this service is in some way connected with a bank's obligation to the community. A bank has a definite public service to perform. It is dependent on the public for its living. A bank never could be profitable on its own invested capital. But it takes its deposits and invests them wisely and profitably—in the interest of legitimate private and public business."

C. R. Evans, manager of J. C. Penney & Co., discussed some business practices which Hope firms might adopt profitably for themselves and the community. "We should have some means of agreeing on closing dates for legal or special holidays," Mr. Evans said. "As matters now stand, each merchant wants to know what the other fellow plans to do about closing. Rural folks want to know whether the business houses in general are going to be closed during the holiday. We should have some means of agreeing among ourselves and then announcing our decision through the newspaper so that the trade territory will know definitely how Hope is situated with respect to trade on a holiday."

"I think it would also be a good idea if all of us made plans to supply drinking water to our customers, especially through the summer months. Every business man knows the trouble our customers are put to, in finding public drinking water during the hot months."

R. M. McKinney, manager of the Southwestern Bell Telephone company here, told of the telephone services which are available but infrequently used by the public. Chief among these, he said, are the phoning of telegrams to the local telegraph offices, and charging the telegram on the next month's phone bill. National advertisers are beginning to use the telephone directory to advertise national brands, he said. Another little known feature, he observed, is the station-to-station rate on long distance calls, but which effects a considerable saving.

N. W. Denty, of the Hempstead the lesser known forms of insurance. County Abstract company, discussed such as that on tourists' baggage, and use of occupancy insurance. This latter form applies to a business which has been burned out or otherwise stopped by disaster. This insurance, he said, covers the fixed charges necessary to hold an organization together while the plant is being rebuilt and the business is gotten into production again.

Alex. H. Washburn, publisher of The Star, spoke briefly on the value of a retail credit bureau to a merchant's customers.

Advertising Aids Texas To Settle Ranch Disputes

LUBBOCK, Tex., Jan. 10.—(P)—The South Plains area of Texas has found that it pays to advertise its farming opportunities.

A year ago Lubbock started a campaign to bring settlers to the section that formerly was raw ranch land. This fall alone 600 families moved into the district and more than 90,000 acres were sold at low prices.

Several large ranches that once spread over thousands of acres have been split up into farms averaging 160 acres apiece.

Next year, in an effort to increase its population still more, Lubbock will spend $22,000 for national advertising of the South Plains area. Cotton, corn, sudan grass, wheat, grain sorghums and live stock are grown on the former ranch land.

As Army Air Fleet Prepared For Icy 3500-Mile Tour

These pictures show scenes as a score of the army's crack pilots prepared to take off from Selfridge Field, Mich., for a winter test flight along a 3500-mile "battle front," extending from Detroit to Spokane, Wash., and return. Maintaining constant radio communication with Washington, the pilots were to "attack" cities en route, while studying flying conditions amid zero weather. One of the fast pursuit planes, equipped with skis, is pictured above. At the right you see Lieutenant N. D. Sillin wearing a fur-lined leather suit. Major Ralph Royce, flight commander, is shown at the left below, and directly above him is Sergeant K. E. Wilson, wearing radio earphones inside his fur-lined helmet. Eighteen pursuit ships and three transports were to make the flight.

Woman Attacked At Hot Springs

Assailant Shoots Glass Out of Car to Prove Gun Would Shoot

HOT SPRINGS, Jan. 10.—(P)—Mrs. Withers Sotte, 30 years of age, reported to police today, that a man, whose name is withheld, attacked her last night, and with a point of a pistol forced her to drive into the suburban district of the city.

According to reports the man appeared to be intoxicated, and shot out the glass of the car to prove to the woman that the gun would shoot. Mrs. Sotte, after struggling for some time secured the gun and threw it out.

Blowdowns were put on the trail but proved unsuccessful. Mrs. Sotte told police that she drove up in front of a friend's house, and suddenly a man appeared from the rear of the car and spoke to her, leaped into the car, closed the door, and with the point of a gun made her drive to the edge of town. After breaking away from the grasp of her assailant, Mrs. Sotte ran to a near by tourist camp where she phoned her husband and police.

Japan's Tunnel Near Completion

Minister to Explode Final Charge Blasting Six Mile Hole.

TOKYO, Jan. 10.—The Shimizu railway tunnel connecting the prefectures of Gumma and Niigata, which will be the largest of its kind in the Orient and the seventh largest in the world will be completed January 10. The length will be 21,331.8 "shaku," which is approximately equal to six miles.

Only a few feet remains to be bored, before the two construction gangs meet at the center of the tunnel.

When everything is set for the last blast, Dr. Yoku Egi, Minister of Railways, will turn on the electric switch in his office in the Railway Department Building in Tokyo, connected to the tunnel about 100 miles away, and explode the charge.

About 700 workers have been working in the tunnel for the last six years. The full cost is estimated at Yen 46,000,000.

The railways, it is expected, will run through the tunnel by September, 1931, and will considerably diminish the distance between Tokyo and Niigata.

15,000 Lives Lost As China Suffers Intense Cold Wave

Country Witnesses Severe Weather In Sixty Years

MANY DIE ON STREET

Thousands Are Suffering and Many Are Without Homes

SHANGHAI, China, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Loss of 15,000 lives as the result of intense cold in the Suiyuan district near Shansi province was reported to the National Government News Agency in a dispatch from Peking today.

Frigid temperatures in the north west part of China resulted in many deaths and caused much suffering. One hundred persons were reported frozen to death in two days in Hankow and Wuchang and 20 Chinese coolies were dead in the streets of Hankow. This section witnessed the coldest weather in sixty years. Thousands of the poor are suffering and many are homeless.

Hot Dog Mayor Is for The Commoners

Public Parks Opened To Spooners; Barbs Off City Hall Fences.

DALLAS, Tex., Jan. 10.—Mayor J. Waddy Tate would make Dallas a mecca for plain people, hewers of wood and drawers of water.

Wearers of the soup and fish run second in his official derby. His heart beats in sympathy with that under the blue shirt, and to the tongue versed in lore of the laboring classes he lends the most attentive ear.

Since he swept into the office of chief executive of Dallas on a "hot dog platform" some nine months ago he has exerted a powerful influence toward his ideal.

"I'm for anything that suits the plain people, and whatever will help them is going over in this town if I have my say," he declared.

Tate's note of democracy rings out in the Highland Park annexation controversy, ranging about an elite suburban district.

"If it can come in just as any other section, it is welcome. But if it expects special favors for its aristocracy—stay out," Tate vehemently asserted.

How well the hot dog platform has been adhered to it carried Tate to the mayoralty is attested by the following of his many "blue shirt" precedent-breakers:

Choosing an inaugural ball—"First time a mayor in the United States did it, I guess, and nobody but a few from Highland Park crashed the gate," he declared.

Ordering removal of spikes from railings around the city hall—"So the people to whom the hall belongs can sit on them and rest."

Selling the snakes in the zoological gardens and substituting donkeys for the kiddies to ride—"While scions of the rich are riding their Shetland ponies."

Revolving the order closing city parks belong to the people, and they can use them at any hour. Lovers are going to spoon somewhere and if they park on the side of the road without lights, another can will hit them and kill somebody."

Ordering "free days" at city swimming pools during the summer—"So the plain people can get their Saturday night bath."

Having city hall flag lowered to half mast for deceased dog catcher and thereby setting a precedent—"He was a good one, and we expressed our regret at his death."

Ordering all married women employed by the city discharged, to meet opposition from commissioners and be told—"Give the ones who need the work a chance. What's a husband for if not to support his wife?"

Slayer Is Given Death Penalty

Little Rock Jury Convicts First of Accused Negroes

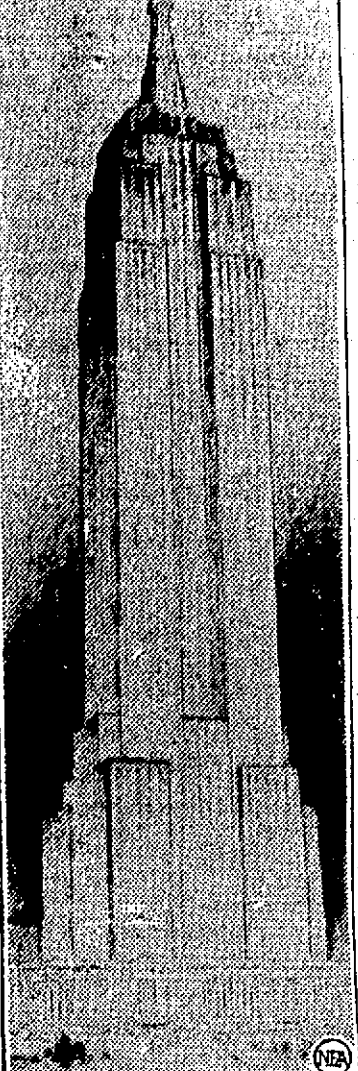

LITTLE ROCK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—A jury today returned a verdict of guilty of first degree murder in the case of George Washington, Negro, in connection with the slaying of W. H. Roberts, filling station operator. The death penalty was fixed.

James and Lindsey Turnage, negroes, also are to be tried on a charge in connection with the murder of Roberts.

The deceased died the day after he was wounded, but said three negroes attempted to hold up his station near the city, and the exchange of several shots resulted in the wounding of him.

The jury took the case shortly before noon today, and a verdict was returned one-half hour later.

Mooring Mast on Tallest Building

Newest architectural mammoth on the Manhattan skyline, the 1100-foot Empire State Building—to be tallest and largest in the world—is shown above in an architect's drawing. The huge skyscraper is now under construction. High above the building's 85 stories, you see here the 300-foot mooring tower which is to be built for dirigibles. There airships may discharge passengers who will be brought to the ground by express elevators. Former Governor Alfred E. Smith is president of the corporation erecting the structure.

Henderson Under Scrutiny of U. S.

Federal Agents Investigating Alleged Profanity on KWKH.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Department of Justice agents are investigating the complaint of Senator Dill, Democrat, Washington, that profanity is being used over radio station KWKH, owned and operated by W. K. Henderson at Shreveport, La.

Acting upon a letter received from the senator, Attorney General Mitchell ordered inquiry. He is prepared to refer the facts disclosed by the investigation to the district attorney in Louisiana.

Again complaining of the language sent over the country from this station, Senator Dill yesterday demanded in the Senate that Henderson be arrested and prosecuted.

Dill emphasized that he was not interested in the merits of Henderson's attacks upon the chain stores, and he did not want this issue confused with his demand that obscene language be discontinued.

Quartet Affords Kiwanis Program

Frank May Introduces Washington Group At Local Meeting

Frank May led a hearty quartet in an excellent singing program at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of Hope Kiwanis club Thursday noon at Hotel Barlow.

With Mr. May as his guests were the other members of Washington's well-known quartet, Lat Mosses, Willie Harris and Paul Rowe. The quartet entertained for about 30 minutes with a variety of songs and features.

Mr. May, at the conclusion of the meeting, was elected the club delegate to the Missouri-Kansas-Arkansas district convention of Kiwanis, which will be held at Kansas City next Monday, January 13.

The Kiwanis board of directors met last night with President Roy Allen, in the millinery shop of Chap Weltman. Routine club matters were discussed.

Nashville Girl Missing Since Late Wednesday

Believed Mother of Child Took Her From School Grounds.

THOUGHT KIDNAPED

Officers Have Instituted Wide Search for Small Girl

NASHVILLE, Jan. 10.—Mary Margaret Lombard, aged 11 years, was kidnapped Wednesday afternoon after the school had closed for the day, and no trace of her had been found up to "noon" yesterday, although a wide search had been instituted by the officers.

The little girl has made her home for several years with her aunt, Mrs. Jesse Clegg, in this city, although her mother is living. It is now believed by the officers and the relatives of the kidnapped girl that she was taken by her mother, who has quarreled with her sisters, and hopes she held that she is safe because of this condition.

Witnesses saw the little girl called to a small car by the school grounds being told by a woman that she had some things in the car for her. The woman was accompanied by a man, neither of whom was recognized by any of the witnesses. The little girl got into the car, and no trace of her has been found since.

When the little girl did not make her appearance on time, Mrs. Clegg investigated and found that the child had been kidnapped, and reported to Sheriff Milwee immediately.

The little girl it is said is her to a nice fortune, and Mrs. B. S. Jacques of Henrietta, Okla., another aunt, has been named as her guardian, although she made her home with Mrs. Clegg. However, it is not believed that ransom was the cause of the kidnapping.

Stephens Will Be Tried at Ashdown

Aged Man Charged With Death of Son-in-Law Last October.

ASHDOWN, Jan. 10.—Trial of J. K. Stephens, 75, on a charge of murder in connection with the death of his son-in-law, W. R. Kernell, 60, was set for Tuesday in Little River county district court, officials announced Thursday.

Kernell, in a statement before his death, declared that while unloading a wagon of cane syrup, his father-in-law suddenly attacked him and stabbed him twice with a knife. He said he was unable to give any reasons for the attack.

Kernell, fatally stabbed at his home near Allena, Ark., October 3, died in a Texarkana hospital October 13.

Stephens, arrested on Kernell's death and held since in the county jail as Ashdown has made no statement according to Sheriff J. G. Sanderson.

Bodenhamer Speaks In National Capitol Today

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Universal military service was discussed by O. L. Bodenhamer, of El Dorado, Ark., National Commander of the American Legion here today. He said the one essential element of National defense was the lack of Universal militarism. The American Legion believes the National defense program is being made observant to economy which presents full and fair trial to the provision outlined in act of 920.

Bodenhamer said the nation found itself unprepared in each war since colonial times.

CITY

Apply the revenues of the municipal power plant to develop the industrial and social resources of Hope.
More city pavement in 1930, and improved sanitary conditions in the alleys and business back-yards.
Support the Chamber of Commerce.

COUNTY

A county highway program providing for the construction of a minimum amount of all-weather road each year, to gradually reduce the dirt road mileage.
Political and economic support for every scientific agricultural program which offers practical benefits to Hempstead county's greatest industry.
Encourage farmer organizations, believing that co-operative effort is as practical in the country as it is in town.

STATE

Continued progress on the state highway program.
Fearless tax reform, and a more efficient government through the budget system of expenditures.
Free Arkansas from the cattle tick.

Public Alleys and Drainage

THE STAR has been harping on the deplorable condition of Hope's alleys, for a selfish reason if no other.

Between the postoffice building and the back end of The Star plant is a wide and poorly drained area which serves as the back yard of a dozen or fifteen business houses. The only access to this district, save the front door, is a dirt alley which is impassable with one day's rain.

We cite the above case because it is probably typical of most of the business back yards of the city. It isn't the fault of the city government, the Chamber of Commerce, or any other one agency; Hope simply hasn't gotten further than paying her public streets at this time. But we should be thinking about plans to take care of the alleys.

An improved alley means more than transportation. It is an important drainage feature. In our own back yard the surface water has no place to go. It collects in mudholes and waits for dry weather to be evaporated.

Proper drainage of the public streets is never obtained until the streets are paved. Likewise, the drainage of the business back yards is never secured until the area is graded down to a paved strip connecting with the streets and the public sewerage system.

Here is one of the vital parts of Hope's municipal program for 1930, and we know that mayor and city council are just as much interested as any business man in seeing it accomplished. What we need is a suggested plan to finance it.

On With The Survey

LOVERS of the fair name and continued progress of Arkansas will hope with all the earnestness they possess that Governor Parnell's announced intention of having a political survey made by an unbiased group may prove more than a mere political gesture calculated to improve his own chances in the next political campaign.

Such sensible suggestions come out of the state capital so rarely that most of us will be forgiven for thinking it is merely the preliminary flourish of a hot campaign issue. The prompt comment upon the situation made by Candidate Lee Cazort give weight to the suspicion.

The survey itself is valueless unless the state government means to carry out the recommendations of the investigators. The most uninformed tyro realizes that there is more waste motion and lost power in the Arkansas political arena than in a 1911 Ford. Enough money is wasted every year to run the state and leave a large balance in the bank. But politicians made this condition and the layman is slow to believe that politicians will make a serious effort to save it.

The average good citizen will heartily endorse the publication of both the prospective gubernatorial candidates on this question. We need such a survey and we need to act upon the recommendations that are sure to follow the survey and, as Candidate Cazort has said, we need to do it long enough ahead of the coming political campaign so that it may not be made a campaign issue and the force of the movement lost.

That the proposed investigation will disclose many a soft job that was created to reward some political henchman is a foregone conclusion. That it will expose a parasite on the body politic is a certainty. But where is the profit in learning these facts if nothing is to be done about it? To abolish useless commissions and tear the "pie eaters" away from the public trough means stirring the animosity of those who are gathering the grapes. Does anyone imagine that this task is going to be honestly undertaken by a candidate for public office?

Our political system renders it dangerous for any public official to make an honest effort in behalf of the public. Any unselfish move is damned and is certain to prove a boom-rang for its proponent.

The Bureau of Municipal Research will make an honest and unbiased survey, if they are employed, but our chance of getting their recommendations carried out seems exceedingly remote. However, one step in the right direction is better than none, so on with the survey.—The Jonesboro Tribune.

Let's Get the Clinkers Out!

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Five statesmen of more or less renown comprise the official membership of the subcommittee of the Senate judiciary committee which has developed so many sensations in its investigation of lobbying in Washington.

But the engine which makes the machine go is a young man 30 years of age named John Holland. This young Mr. Holland is the committee's investigator. He gets the facts and turns them over to the committee. He sits behind the committee members and makes suggestions to them as they question the witnesses.

Without young Mr. Holland or someone like him the committee wouldn't get very far. And there aren't very many like him.

Tom Walsh Trusts Him
Around here Holland is distinguished as the one man who knows the inside of the investigations of Senator Tom Walsh of Montana. Walsh works alone—and how! Holland, working for Walsh, also works alone and doesn't encumber himself with assistants.

Holland, when he was only 24, got off to a large start when he became Walsh's investigator in the famous Teapot Dome scandals. He became the only investigator in whom Walsh had any great confidence. Now they are teaming up together again. Although men like Borah, Caraway and Blaine are on the lobby committee, Walsh, the old bulldoggy, matchless inquisitor, has nearly made this lobby investigation his own show.

The committee has been successful because Holland has gone into the private files of the lobbyists and their employers and revealed things they didn't want to be known. After he has given the main facts to the committee and sits ready to prompt the inquisitors, there isn't much for witnesses to do but tell the truth.

Holland was born in 1899 and comes from Butte, Mont. He graduated from the Montana School of Mines and came here in 1921 to study law at night while working as a clerk in Walsh's office during the day. He passed the bar all right, but was delayed a year in finishing his post-graduate work because he had to work so hard on Teapot Dome.
He went into that after Secretary Albert B. Fall had complied with the LaFollette resolution asking him to turn over all the records on the naval oil leases. Up to that time Holland had been engaged in minor work, principally checking up points of law for Walsh. But along came a cart-load or two of documents from the Interior Department and the young man was put to work on them.

Walsh was the most active Democratic member of the public lands committee. He had given Holland a tough job, but also an opportunity for great achievement which he seized. Before long he had learned that Fall had neglected to send along some of the most important papers. Walsh and Holland had started with the idea that they were dealing with a question of law concerning the validity of the leases. Thus Holland dug up the facts which were used in the civil suits which finally ended in the supreme court with the recovery of the naval oil reserves by the government.

But it was also learned that Mr. Fall had become suddenly affluent and investigation on the basis of that revealed that Mr. Fall had taken money from Mr. Doheny and Mr. Sinclair. The public lands committee hearings ran from October, 1922, to April or May 1924, and in that time the committee had no special investigator of its own but only Holland, the employee of Senator Walsh.

Canutt Makes Wild Ride In "A Texan's Honor"

Winner of the Theodore Roosevelt Trophy as the best all-around cowboy of the world, Yalima Canutt, who will be seen Saturday at the New Grand theatre in the J. Charles Davis Production, "A Texan's Honor," directed by Bruce Mitchell, is known as the dare-devil of the saddle among the stars, actors and actresses in Hollywood.

As the winner of the Theodore Roosevelt Trophy demonstrates Canutt is the peer of riders and consequently all the sensational stunts and thrilling riding he does in his own pictures is genuine—that is he never employs a double to do them in order to avoid danger.

Inasmuch as he has been crowned the champion cowboy of the world, Canutt believes his fans expect to see him perform some of the dare-devil stunts that gave him that honor. With the result that in all his productions his fans see some of the most skillful and at the same time reckless riding the camera can record.

In "A Texan's Honor" for instance, he rides with reckless abandon down a Sierra Madre mountain in California with a slope of sixty-five degrees. The story required his pursuers to follow him but they were unable to make the descent and had to follow a different incline. Canutt made the descent safely but several times his wonder horse, "Boy," that he uses in all his productions, slid and all but fell. Expert horsemanship by Canutt saved him.

"What's the news?"

WHEN COLUMBUS and his caravels returned from the New World, the first question shouted from the shore was, "What's the news?"

That's always the question of paramount importance. Years ago folks asked it of the post rider, the soldier returned from the wars, the man who had been down to the settlements, or the neighbor back from the general store.

Today, you find the answer in your newspaper. Through the newspapers the news of the world and of the community quickly becomes public knowledge. And remember this—it takes two kinds of news to make a modern paper complete.

The first tells of happenings near and far—of fires, sports, elections, accidents, marriages, deaths, great men, great events.

The second tells of things you eat, wear and use—things you buy, things being sold to your friends and neighbors. This news is advertising.

It's just as important to keep up to date on the advertising in this paper as it is to read about what's doing in the world of events.

Advertising is an essential news service
Is distinctly to your advantage to be guided by it

Texas Girl Prefers Death Rather Than Jail Term Disgrace

EL PASO, Texas, Jan. 10.—Sixteen-year-old Consuela Alarcon told police from her hospital bed here Wednesday that she preferred death rather than face disgrace by going to jail.
The girl faced an abusive language charge, brought by the wife of Miguel Castillo, whom she charged criminally assaulted her.
One hour before her case was scheduled to come up for trial in court, Consuela drank a quantity of poison.
"I thought I would be fined, and I knew I would have to go to jail because I couldn't pay the fine," she said. "Even death seemed better to me than disgrace and confinement."
The judge, before whom the case was to be tried, said he had decided to drop the charge, but the girl did not know that.
Her condition was critical.

Murder Convict Keeps Carolina Prison Zoo

RALEIGH, N. C., Jan. 10.—(AP)—To North Carolina state prison convicts William Campbell is the greatest showman in the world.
Campbell, serving 20 years for murder, has a private zoo that includes white rats, a Texas ant bear, chins, chills, monkeys, a groundhog, snakes, foxes, a goat which shares its pen with an alligator, dogs, rabbits and cats.
He bought the animals with profits from a delicatessen for prisoners in which Otto Wood, also a murder convict, is a partner.
Campbell was sentenced to die in 1923 after he was convicted of killing a nurse in Owen hospital near Asheville. The sentence was commuted to life imprisonment which later was reduced to 20 years.

Donnie Plays, Though His Testimony May Send Mother to Electric Chair

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Jan. 10.—Donnie Schroeder, who'll be five his next birthday, plays about the juvenile detention home here as happily as any child you could find, without a thing in the world to worry him.

For Donnie, being so young, can't realize that the things he said to the policemen who came in to chat with him the other day may send his mother to the electric chair as a murderess.

Donnie's mother is Mrs. Irene Schroeder of Benwood, W. Va., sought through half a dozen states as the "blond gunwoman" who, with two male companions, shot Corporal Brady Paul of the Pennsylvania state police to death near here a matter of ten days ago.

Donnie was with her at the time. He was in the stolen car that Corporal Brady Paul and Private Ernest Moore ordered to halt on the highway; was in it when the woman and two men drew their guns and shot the policeman down.

A night or so later Donnie's mother left him at the home of his grandfather, Joseph Crawford. She kissed him goodby and said, "I'll see you New Year's Day." But she hasn't been back. And Donnie doesn't realize why.

The police found him and took him to the detention home here. They asked him a lot of questions, and Donnie answered readily enough— weaving a terrific web of evidence about his mother and her companions.

"The youngster is cheerful enough in his confinement. He has a big white rabbit for a pet."

"See! He's strong," says Donnie. "But I'll handle him, Lookie!"

He crawls toward the rabbit's hutch and says: "Boo!" The pet jumps back and Donnie crows.

"Ho—I'll get you!" he chortles. A newspaper photographer asks for his picture. He shrinks back, however, when he sees the photographer fixing his flashlight gun.

"Hey! None of that there stuff," he says. "It's fire. I don't like it. Yes, it will hurt me, too. It makes me scared."

The rabbit, curled up in his lap, lends him courage, and he faces the camera. Puff goes the flashlight, and Donnie jumps out of his chair.

"I told you not to do that," he complains. But Donnie soon forgets his fright, and returns to his play.

The police, fearing an attempt to rescue the lad, are keeping a close watch on him. They are hoping that his mother will come back to her boy—and then they will arrest her and try to send her to the electric chair.

Dear Friends:

I heard a good story last night. A fellow was standing on the curbing waiting for somebody. His pants hadn't been pressed for three or four months and they bagged awfully at the knees. An Irishman watched him for quite a while and then went up to him and says, "Well, why don't you jump?"

The point I'm trying to make is this: Would you be safe from such a question if you stood on the curbing?

This popular cleaning and pressing establishment here eliminates the bag from the knee and puts a nice crease down the center. When your pants begin to look as if you were about to jump, it's high time you were calling No. 385.

U. S. Veterinarians
"Big Medicine Men"

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. Jan. 10.—(AP)—To the Navajo Indian, white "horse stickers" from Washington" are powerful medicine men.

Sent into Arizona to eradicate dourine, a serious disease among horses on the Indian reservations, from the United States department of agriculture were no better than so many scamps until they revealed their magic.

They had to slaughter infected animals which was very unpopular with the Navajos.

To overcome the Indian's natural opposition to having his favorite stallion gelded, the veterinarians willing performed the usual ceremonial rites of such an occasion and with a little practice soon were able, in the eyes of the Indian, to imbue the animals with "speed and long wind."

Dr. T. W. Crump, in charge of the expedition, frequently acted "professionally" as dentist, physician, surgeon and undertaker for the Indians. He extracted hundreds of Navajo teeth, sutured wounds, removed splinters, set broken bones, prescribed for the sick, vaccinated against smallpox and made "big medicine" generally.

Frequently the "horse sticker" arbitrated water rights disputes, helped settle estates and decided property ownership.

Winter of Our Discontent
It was Will Shakespeare who wrote something about this being the winter of our discontent. This seems to prove that Will, at one time or other, must have conducted a column of boxing. We have never seen a column of Will's flippant writings. Probably they were lost in the morgue. Things have a way of disappearing like that. But probably Mr. Shakespeare, under the heading of "Bill's Jabs and Jibes," wrote just that lead in a column of comment on the cauliflower talent of his period.

It was probably at a time when old London was having a tournament for a Tunney-Muldoon trophy emblematic of the heavyweight championship of the world. There had been a parade of Sharkeys, Risks, Griffiths and others floundering, scowling, weeping, poking and talking in fact doing everything but what was wanted—delivering a knockout blow to the snout. Will sat at the ringside through it all, saw them split and snort and scowl and flail and shuffle and grab—and then sat down and wrote his lead, "now is the winter of our discontent." Surely it must have been that way.

Will Become Disgusted

Probably some other Johnny Risko and some other Tuffy Griffiths had just put on a bout that was supposed to produce a contender for the cup and the championship. They had pounded one another's chin and ribs during ten rounds. And at the end of the thing Will couldn't for the life of him decide which lad won. Neither was superior. Will was somewhat disgusted when he went to write a piece about it for the papers.

TRESSPASSERS BEWARE!

The new captain of the Texas Aggies is named "Graceton Floyd." And the boys call him "Bill." At Simmons' Christmas cards pressed you with this: "A white elephant wishes you a bear of a Christmas." Naylor Stone, Memphis sports writer, suggests a bout between Art Shires and Dick Burrus of Atlanta. Burrus, former Manager Doc Prothro of Memphis at Atlanta, last summer secured a knockout. Stone suggests he could ask for no greater Shires and Burrus knocked out. Earl Dunlap, the Georgia Tech backfield boy, will become a missionary.

Ouachita Grid Card Complete

Tigers Will Meet Only State Teams Next Season.

ARKADELPHIA, Jan. 10.—Coach Foy H. Hammons announced that his 1930 football schedule calls for nine games, five to be played in Arkadelphia and four in visiting territory. The Ouachita mentor has confined his next year's schedule strictly to Arkansas opponents and in doing so refused games to several out-of-state schools that, if scheduled, would prove to be the high lights of the year.

Included in this number are Vanderbilt, whom the Tigers encountered in Nashville this fall; Mississippi A. & M., who were played in 1929; Louisiana Tech of Ruston, and Louisiana College of Pineville. The 1930 schedule, which is practically complete, but which is still subject to change if unforeseen conflicts arise, is as follows: September 26—Monticello A. & M. at Arkadelphia. October 3—Magnolia A. & M. at Arkadelphia. October 10—State Teachers at Conway. October 17—Little Rock College at Arkadelphia. October 24—College of the Ozarks at Clarksville. October 31—Hendrix - Henderson at Arkadelphia. November 11—Arkansas Tech at Little Rock. November 21—Arkansas College at Batesville. November 27 (Thanksgiving)—Henderson State Teachers at Arkadelphia.

ing) Scott. There had been a round of pulling and hauling after which the Von smote Philip upon the hip and Philip put on the dying gladiator act.

The Terrible Sharkey Man

The Jack Sharkey of that period probably wore a terrible look on his face, too. And fought terribly at times, as well. There were times when Will would wax enthusiastic about him in his "Jabs and Jibes" and other times when he felt like fighting the variety himself. They had to fight for Will all the time. He got into all the fights free, but he wanted at least his money's worth. Sharkey could fight, sometimes; why didn't he fight all the time? Will couldn't understand how a fighter could be a dog one night and a dragon the next. So he wrote a paragraph into his story of discontent in which he said that Sharkey never could satisfy him as a heavyweight champion. Will wanted that trip to Miami, probably, and saw no chance of getting it if the chosen gladiators were of the palooka variety then holding the spotlight. One thing, though, there probably were no Campolos or Carners hovering in the background when Will was doing his writing. If there had been, Will never would have written that line about "My kingdom for a horse."

Shires' Income for Four Fights Exceeds 1929 Diamond Salary

CHICAGO, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Since becoming a professional fist fighter just a month ago yesterday, Charles Arthur "The Great" Shires, has earned exactly $9,000 in four engagements. $2,900 more than he got off playing first base for the Chicago White Sox all last season. The great man got the $8,000 in the short period of 30 days, compared to five months of baseball playing for $5,100. Shires' contract with the White Sox called for $8,500, but fines plastered on him ate up more than $3,000. Shires expects to increase his ring earnings to more than $10,000 by meeting Al Spahrer, catcher for the Braves in Boston tonight.

Pittsburgh Company First To Write 400 Million Unassisted.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 10.—Pittsburgh, noted for its industries, is the home of the Reliance Life Insurance Company, one of the largest of more than 300 old line legal reserve insurance companies in the United States. Reliance life, organized in 1903, was the first company in the history of insurance to sell and maintain on its book more than $400,000,000 of life insurance in its first 25 years without consolidating with any other company or engaging in industrial or group insurance or reinsurance business. In its first quarter-century of existence, Reliance Life established itself on a firm foundation. Its remarkable amount of life insurance in force and its substantial accident and health business indicate increasing public confidence. The growth of its assets from $2,000,000 paid in capital and surplus with which the business was started in 1903 to more than $62,000,000 is proof of sound business management. The development of an agency organization of more than 1,500 representatives operating in 38 of the United States which has produced outstanding business reflects the value of this company's agency and policy contracts and a cordial relationship between the field force and the home office. The strength and solidity of this "Young Giant" among insurance companies established in 25 years should assure its rapid future growth.

Important contributions to insurance through improved policy forms and original protective features have been made by Reliance Life. It was the first company to combine into one contract life, accident and health insurance, which was called the "Perpetual Protection Policy" and introduced in 1913. The Guaranteed Premium Reduction Policy was originated by the Reliance Life actuary in 1909. The distributive disability clause, providing for a monthly payment of one per cent of the face value of the policy in event of total, permanent disability by accident or sickness, was introduced by Senior Vice President

BRUSHING UP SPORTS By Laufer

H. G. Scott in 1912. The formation of Reliance Life was natural to the broad vision of Pittsburgh business men who realized the potentiality for good in the life insurance business just as they had foreseen the possibilities of iron and steel.

Negro Preacher Makes It Clear About What Happened In Garden of Eden

Darwin's theories of the evolution of man were knocked into a cocked hat, according to a newspaper at Gastonia, S. C., which runs the following story:

A negro preacher by the name of Uncle Joe Tate, living in Eastern Carolina, delivered a funeral discourse over the dead body of old Uncle Silvester Mason several years ago, in which he gave an account of the Genesis of the (white) species which throws Darwin and all of his vain philosophy of molecular germinal and atomic creation completely in the shade. He said: "By Breddern, when Adam and Eve was first made dey was hofe niggers. But the good Lord put dem in de garden whar he had his summer apples, and tole 'em, Adam, and Eve may eat dem summer apples much as you want, but jes let dem Fowler apples be—'I dun sabe dem far my special toof. Dey's like sheep meat—too good fur niggers.' Den de good ord he went off 'bout his business lemondin up and down de yeth seekin up whom he mout save up. But he no sooner turn his back dan, jes like two fool niggers, Adam and Eve steel all the Fowler apples. Ebe taste de first one, smack her lubly thick lips, and quired of Adam, 'how is dat for high?' Adam said it was all O. K. and den dey went fur dem Fowler apples like the hehthing Chinese. Bimbe de Lord some back an de fust thing he say was 'Adam! where my Fowler apples?' Den Adam got skeered and said: 'don't no Lord but I speck dat fool Adam took 'em.' Den the Lord got so mad he foikly smashed his toef. He stomped back up to where Adam was standing shivering like a sheep-killin' dog and he made de ground fairly shake as he say: Adam! Adam! you grand old thief; whar for you steel my Fowler apples?' Den Adam got so skeered he turned white as a sheet and my be-lubbed breddern he neber got black any more; and dat accounts for the por white trash we see flyin' round here so grand, votin' de Democratic ticket! Mason Knocks Out Matlock In Fourth

Frankie Bean of Little Rock Winner in Semi-Final at Hot Springs.

HOT SPRINGS, Jan. 10.—Johnny Mason, Cincinnati, last night stopped Jack Matlock, Dallas, in the fourth round of the main event of the season's opening boxing show. Matlock was no match for the younger Mason, although he outweighed Mason 10 pounds. The Dallas battler, a veteran of the ring, is about through, and Mason did as he pleased with him. Mason sent Matlock through the ropes in the second round and scored another knockdown in the same round when he clipped the lumbering, plodding Texan on the chin. Mason weighed 168, Matlock 178. The best bout of the night was the semi-final between Joey Clark, this city, and Frankie Bean, Little Rock. Bean won the fight in the sixth, when Clark fouled him for the third time. The crowd was all for Bean.

New Golfing Togs Are Seen on Smartest Links

PARIS, Jan. 10.—There has been an upheaval in sport fashions and as a result golf knickers are out and tennis bloomers are in. Smart golfers and tailors decided that golf knickers have become far too popular with men who never held a golf club in their hands. In their place have come long golfing trousers, which like the riding breeches worn by the Prince of Wales are loose to the knees and then tightly fitting to the ankles. The tennis bloomers are white and replace the flapping trousers. They are really knickers, coming just below the knees, and are generally in white cotton but can be in white or gray tweed. who gave the local man a boxing lesson in almost every round but the fourth. Bean took the fight on a moment's notice, substituting for Kid Anthony. Bean weighed 136, Clark 132. The preliminary was won by Lawrence Lee, Little Rock negro, 12, over Charlie "Kid" Williams of Havana, Cuba, 146.

SAND FLY "YELLOW JACKET" "HORNET" (Chilled) "BUCKSHOT" for mixed land for black land for sandy land for buckshot land

The "Bee-Line" Middle Burster

THE Avery Bee Line Middle Bursters are so called because they make a "bee-line" furrow from end to end. Here, at last, is the middle burster for which thousands of farmers have waited. Here is a middle burster which plows a bee-line furrow at an even depth and does not bounce or pitch. Users enthusiastically declare it to be the greatest of all middle bursters. They find it easy to handle and to guide. They can do better work, more easily and quickly, than with any middle burster they have ever used. Avery middle bursters, in various models, have been prime favorites with American farmers for many years. All their good points are retained. Faults common to many middle bursters have been avoided. We say therefore that the Avery Bee Line is near perfection in a middle burster. We know that it will do all and more than we claim for it. It is impossible to fully appreciate all the advantages of Avery Bee Line Middle Bursters without a personal examination. We can only mention here a few of the many improvements and new ideas that make it so superior to any other implement of its kind. Read these carefully, and then come see them. Only by so doing can you realize what a tremendous advance they are. Only by seeing them and examining them can you learn that it will mean more crops and better paying crops for you because of the easier, faster and better work they will do. Thin section, reversible, heat-treated stinger. Adjustable slotted chilled heel slide. One-piece, drop-forged rudder frame. Rigid handles. Easy adjustments. Special Bee Line beam construction.

There is a full line of famous Avery walking, riding and tractor plows, tillage implements and Champion harvesting machinery.

Low Feed Costs Are Often Poor Economy

Low feed costs do not necessarily mean good economy. They are more likely to mean the opposite. It may seemingly be a saving to cut down on the amount of feed given layers but in reality it is not because you are cutting down the amount of raw material from which to make eggs. The hen first eats feed to maintain herself, which means that her egg production is dependent upon the surplus food nutrients. A flock of layers needs lots of feed to produce lots of eggs. More than that they need a well balanced ration; one that supplies all of the food nutrients in the correct proportion. Where one or more of the food nutrients needed to produce an egg are missing it means a total waste of the other food nutrients as a hen will not cheat in her product. Many of the simple rations used today are not complete feeds. Poultrymen who are making money from their flocks are feeding the best that money can buy and giving the birds an unlimited opportunity to eat all they want.

Rash Romance

BEHIN HERE TODAY
JUDITH CAMERON, typist in a New York office, is a lovely girl, the interest of ARTHUR KNIGHT, her employer. Knight is a reserved, sensitive, lonely since his daughter, TONY, is, and son, JUNIOR, is, and most of their time away from home. Judith fascinates Knight. He takes her to dinners and concerts. At the end of a whirlwind courtship Knight asks Judith to marry him and she accepts. The next evening she is nervous and distressed and tells him she has something to confess.

He laughs and refuses to listen. They plan a six weeks' honeymoon in Bermuda.

The ocean voyage and arrival in Hamilton harbor are glamorous events for the young bride. She and Arthur swim and golf and enjoy all the island's outdoor sports. Arthur tells Judith he is as he cares for her. One evening during the dancing Judith pleads a headache and goes to her room. Knight, stirred by a wave of jealousy, follows. He has just arrived when there is a knock at the door.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VIII

A BELL-BOY in blue uniform and brass buttons stood in the entrance way as Knight pulled the door back.

"A message for you, sir," he said. Knight frowned, took the yellow envelope which the youth held forward and handed him a coin.

Judith had arisen and came forward anxiously. She was looking very lovely in her rose and pink draperies. She did not speak but stood waiting, concern written plainly on her face, as her husband tore open the envelope and studied the cablegram.

He must have read it through twice.

"Judith," he said then, glancing up quickly, "I've got to get back to New York!" His words clicked with decision.

"Business?"

"No—it's Tony. Read it."

He thrust the yellow sheet of paper toward her and Judith's fingers closed over it. Something had caught at her heart—it seemed as though the heart had stopped beating—at mention of Tony's name. The jumble of words was meaningless but finally they straightened out into sentences. Then Judith understood.

The message had been sent to Knight's business address in New York and there forwarded. It read: "Sailing tonight on Paris. Meet me in New York Tuesday. Helena tried to boss me too much. Your loving daughter prefers you to Europe. Much, much love. TONY."

"Oh!" said Judith. It was the only thing she seemed able to say. Arthur crumpled the envelope which he was still holding and shot the ball of paper into a basket. He shook his head drearily.

"Tony's been up to mischief!" he sighed. "Helena's my sister. She was supposed to chaperone Tony during a year on the continent. Lord knows what they've rowed about! Well, it would never do to leave Tony Knight to her own devices in a mood like this! Judith—much as I hate to give this all up—we've got to go back."

JUDITH came nearer, brushing her fingers softly through the hair above his temple.

"Yes, of course," she said simply. "I'll be glad to meet Tony."

"Oh, you'll love her. Everybody loves Tony. Never been able to refuse her anything in the world myself," he mused. "I know I've spoiled her—but I couldn't help it! Well—let's see if we take the boat here Saturday well be home Monday morning. Guess that'll give us time to get scrubbed up and meet the Paris when it docks."

"Judith," he said, glancing up quickly, "I've got to get back to New York."

He was smiling brightly. Judith felt that not for the world could she let him know the trepidation and despair which had settled over her. She went back to the dressing table and sat with her back toward him.

Five short days and she was to stand face to face with Tony Knight! Two days more and they would turn their backs on this paradise, these islands of turquoise and gold. The honeymoon—their beautiful, utterly, utterly perfect honeymoon—would be ended. Ahead would be New York.

Judith closed her eyes and caught her hands together as though in agonized, silent prayer. A minute later she turned about gallantly to say to her husband: "Aren't you going to send a reply?"

"No," he said. "Let her worry a bit. It'll be good for her. Don't you see I can't give in? Helena must have been right, of course. The only time in the world I can discipline Tony is when she's away from me. No—I won't answer her!" Again apprehensions—chill and forbidding—swept over Judith. She crept closer to her husband. "Arthur," she said softly. "Say you love me—"

Knight's arm slipped about his lovely young wife. Warm, lingering kisses touched her forehead, her golden hair and then swiftly, hotly, he found her lips. Each of them—in that long, long caress—forgot about Tony.

MORNING brought the same bright sunshine, the same zephyr breezes and beckoning sports of preceding days, but somehow everything seemed changed.

Judith and Arthur had breakfast in their rooms, Judith looking rather like a huge chrysanthemum played about like fireflies.

THERE was bustle and stir all morning, getting the luggage to the boat, saying farewell, listening to them, trying to remember where this was and what it had become of that. Finally stepping into the quaint carriage for the last slow ride to the docks, trying to drink in all the riotous, lush, blossoms and trees and shrubs, very and to paint them in memory against a background of sky and sea.

Judith Knight felt that she must remember every blessed detail of that picturesque landscape, she must, she must!

And though there were wranglings at heart to leave it all behind and walk up the gangplank and the good ship was familiar, and seemed to offer friendly waving. There were men and women about with whom they had become acquainted at the hotel.

As the band struck up its sprightly music and the ship edged gradually seaward, Judith and Arthur Knight were both at the railing, joined in the cheers of departure.

The six weeks' honeymoon had shrunk to only one.

That first afternoon, they stood on the sun deck, joining in tennis and shuttlecock, which Judith made very, very bad, so that Arthur jeered at her and make up for this by teasing her very special cakes at tea-time.

Judith seemed overjoyed with nervous energy. She wanted to do something, every minute. Bridge was too quiet for her and so they danced after dinner. She wore her black gown and was the most attractive woman present. Partners looked about her. At 11 o'clock, she said she had had enough of dancing.

"But it's a fine night," Arthur protested. "Too fine to spend inside a stateroom."

"They wandered up to the top deck. In a nook sheltered by lifeboats they found deck chairs. Off and insisted came the ocean's roar and the sound of churning spray. The moon's light cast a dripping golden path across the water.

The two sat, silent for a time. Judith's heart was beating rapidly. There were things she wanted to ask Arthur Knight and which she dared not. She wanted to know things of which he had never spoken. She could not force these confidences.

Many times Judith had wondered about that first Mrs. Knight, who was Tony's mother. Arthur had mentioned her but once, and then in a way to repel questioning. Judith felt a natural respect for privacy. There was another, more powerful seal upon her tongue. Judith Knight could not ask questions because she herself refused to answer them.

And yet so much that she must know about Tony Knight depended upon the sort of woman the girl's mother had been. Judith wanted to ask questions. Instead she pressed Arthur's hand firmly.

The man spoke, proving that their minds followed similar channels.

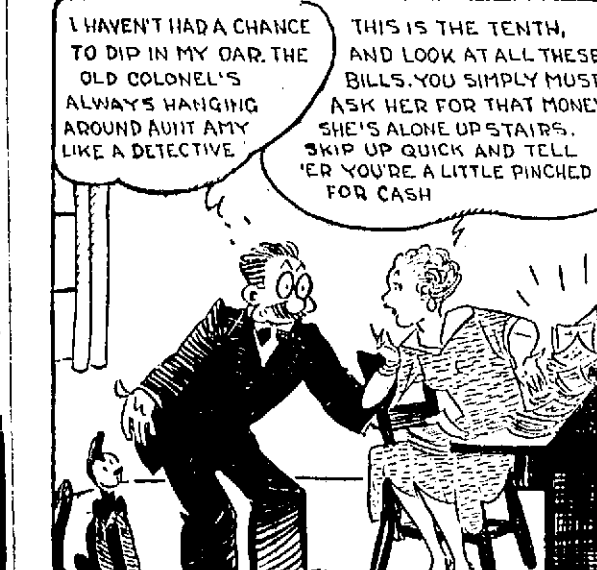

"It's going to be—a trifle awkward," he said, hesitatingly. "Perhaps after all I should have written Tony and Junior about our marriage."

"Perhaps," Judith echoed. Suddenly she clung to him fiercely.

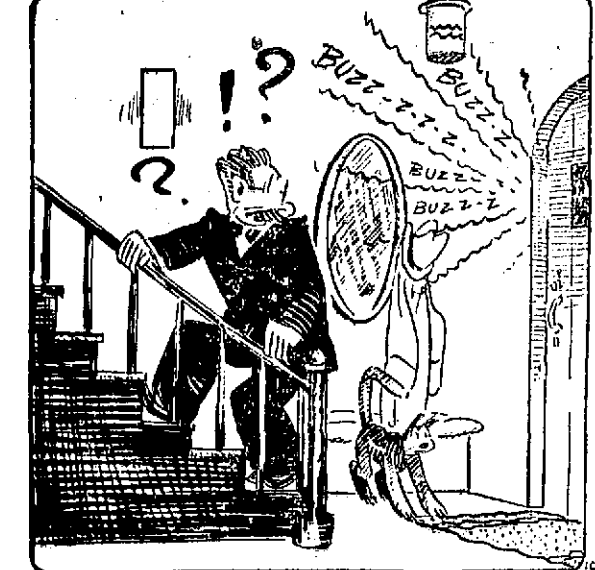

"Arthur," she cried, "Arthur—you do believe in me—don't you?" In the dim light the man could read the measureless terror of those blue eyes.

Powell-Palette Team Comes to Saenger Sunday

A team made famous on the all-talking screen by their work in tracking down murderers in celluloid—William Powell and Eugene Palette, will be seen and heard together in "Pointed Heels" a Paramount production which comes to the Saenger theatre two days beginning on Sunday next.

In "Pointed Heels" Powell is the producer of stage revues and Palette is their star. Experience as a team, Powell and Palette appeared in two all-talking pictures based on the S. S. Van Dine murder-mystery novels, "The Canary Murder Case," and "The Greene Murder Case." Powell established the role of Philo Vance in the murder pictures, and Palette was the thick-skulled Sgt. Heron.

Helen "Sugar" Kane is co-featured with Powell in "Pointed Heels." In six months' time Miss Kane has established a great record in pictures. Coming from the stage where she made a sensation with her "Boop-Boop-Doop" style of singing, she had her debut in Richard Dix's all-talking film, "Nothing But the Truth." Her next picture was the musical extravaganza, "Sweetie," and now comes her third, "Pointed Heels" in which she is co-starred.

Fay Wray and Richard "Skeets" Gallagher are billed as the leaders of the support. Others in the cast are Phillips Holmes, handsome young son of Taylor Holmes, stage and screen favorite, and Adrienne Dore.
